

Randy Orzano

Bio

Randy Orzano, randyorzano.com, is a mixed-media artist who lives and works in Sharon, Connecticut. Whether collaborating with a colony of bees or chronicling the growth of milkweed, his work is an imprint of the layers of the creative process. Although he follows a pre-set sequence of stages, the final result depends on many variables beyond his control. The artist remains open to the unknown.

Randy Orzano worked as a civil engineer for consultants in New York and Connecticut and transitioned to art with the help of teachers at the Creative Arts Workshop in New Haven, including Ann Lehman, metal sculpture, Steven DiGiovanni, painting, Pam Rubin, drawing, Tina Re, painting and Peter Ziou, painting. Other influential teachers were at the Washington Art Association: Marc Chabot, drawing and Trey Friedman, painting.

Randy Orzano has had solo shows at the AX gallery in Torrington, the Found Gallery, Norfolk, The Loft Gallery in New Preston, and the Hammond Museum in North Salem, NY.
